The world of photography has been thoroughly changing over the last decade. We have record, compact, tiny sensors, we have small, cheap, and smart Pocket Cameras, we have mobile phones that are able to record good photos, there are smart phones that can totally take care of the camera's job, apps that turn the iOS device into a translator as well as a camera, we have iPad Pros that now work like DSLR's and even Leica's, and we are not satisfied with simple Top Quality images? Unfortunately, Adobe Photoshop & Lightroom still try to do too much. It's not that the technology is not there to make it work; it is. I am sure that, within a few years, we can afford to buy the fastest computers available on the market today. It's simply a question of how many of them we will need, what we will do with them, and what we want to accomplish with software in the first place. Currently, the only problem I perceive with the iPad Pro, is the fact that it cannot actually do everything. Yes, it's a great companion for creators and designers, but it's not an all-encompassing workhorse. We can get away with that when it comes to mobile devices, but it's simply a different world for desktop and laptop computers. With that said, I think that the future holds some positive changes. It would be awesome to see a lot of software developers start embracing the iPad Pro in a user-friendly way. And this means much less software going back and forth to the desktop and a lot more truly mobile user experience. Adobe Photoshop is an example of how this must be done. Just look at what a user does with all those presets and adjustment layers. Dragging them to the desktop and saving them is a chore, when all we need is a single button to make that all happen. There is a lot of functionality that needs to be put in place for that to happen, but it is one of the possibilities if the software makes the necessary changes.

2. Smart Sharpen. New Smart Sharpen, powered by the latest advances in machine learning, automatically selects the most effective edges to sharpen. It works even when the image doesn't have lots of contrast in the highlights or shadows, and it can replace the Detail panel highlight edge lasso tool. Smart Sharpen also works with textures to selectively sharpen the highest contrast areas that look "textured" or will look better following the texture. 3. Always aware of where you are. New features in the Object Selection module, including Path Selection and Grid, allow you to select multiple objects in one action. You can then add them together, or remove them from the image, in one step. If you are only selecting an object, you can change the size, color and even a mask. 4. A Dynamic View. The Dynamic View, powered by Adobe Sensei Artificial Intelligence, is a new feature that improves content editing interfaces by transforming selected content from any item on the Layers Panel into a tool that's customized just for the item. The view can be turned off or deleted. See it in action here: New Content-Aware Fill lets you remove red-eye and repair other blemishes using just one click. It's a great alternative to other editing tools that are considered invasive and destructive, like using the Clone Stamp feature near red or magenta objects. Changes to the Lens Correction panel allow for more flexibility and accurate adjustment of Lens distortions. This allows for the simplest, most accurate adjustments to Dust, Strong Corners, and other undesirable distortions. Moreover, it enables more precise correction of Lens Distortion than previously possible.

Adobe continues to develop new features to Photoshop, so be sure to visit the searchable Photoshop web help pages for articles, tutorials, answering FAQs, troubleshooting tools, and more. You can also download the digital software and get Creative Cloud for added benefits. Many of the most powerful Adobe Illustrator and Photoshop tool collections — including many featured in the Envato Elements: Photoshop 1 or 2 Tuition and the Photoshop Specialists series — are now available for use within the Adobe Photoshop Elements 13 digital edition. More often than not, people pop out at the back of a picture and we rarely notice their presence. The media-centric design of Photoshop means the option to layer a background image over top of the subject is second nature. Photoshop has a new feature that allows you to copy the appearance of outdoor or in-studio lighting from a picture onto a third-party photo. Selecting this option takes you to an Adjustment layer where you can choose whether to Copy (camera or studio) or Create (photography or sketch) from the image. It's common practice to crop a subject to remove unwanted aspects of the subject or improve its composition. Photoshop now has a feature called "Smart Crop", which basically allows you to remove the part of an image that is unnecessary to its creative potential. Choose Image > Smart Crop or press Ctrl+C when you want to see why you should crop. On the left sidebar you'll see red indicators that are useful for helping you decide which part of the image should be removed in a piece of artwork. Click on the areas that you want to remove to crop the image.
